The IFHE Development Fund is...

The IFHE Development fund is a set of funds administered in individual countries or regions that collect, manage and disperse resources in the form of small grants to support the Mission of IFHE. At the 2022 Congress in Atlanta, United States, two proposals were funded:

The Institute of Himalayan Environmental Research and Education (INHERE) focuses on enabling livelihoods, improving nutrition, and empowering women in villages in Uttarakhand, India through micro solar hatchery enterprises.

The second grant winner, the College of Home Economics, University of Peshawar, Pakistan implements a project on the relation between societal discrimination, parental functioning and child psychosocial well-being" in the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa District.

Projects

Project proposals should address an important need among a target audience that at the same time, extends or strengthens the capacity of home economists or home economics organizations. Projects may be extensions of existing programs or pilot efforts to reach new audiences or address new issues.

Funds cannot be used for capital buildings (such as a school) or for travel to IFHE Congress or Council. We encourage applicants to apply for IFHE World Congress Travel Grants.
